

A dialogue sequence between Baltar and Six discussing testing everyone in the fleet for Cylon indicators.

Gaius Baltar: Is suicide really a sin?

Six (Cylon): A mortal one, I'm afraid. But it's not that bad, is it, Gaius?

Gaius Baltar: 47,905 people in the fleet. There's 47,905 blood samples. 11 hours to test each one for Cylon indicators.

Six: Well, that'll take a while.

Gaius Baltar: 21,956 days.

Six: 60.1534 years.

Gaius Baltar: Well, now, let's figure in a few hours for sleep here and there. We'll call that an even 61, shall we?

Six: Sure.

Gaius Baltar: I'd prefer to kill myself. <Baltar picks up Adama's vial> Commander Adama... are you a Cylon? Tune in tomorrow. <Baltar rests head on table>

Six: Oh, it's hard being a genius.

Gaius Baltar: Yes.

A still from the “Tigh Me Up, Tigh Me Down” episode showing an overwhelmed Baltar surrounded by vials of blood specimens that need to be tested.

